HE laft dispatches from Vienna mentioned, that his Imperial majefty was unalterably determined upon opening the Scheld. And the courier arrived on Monday from Brussels, at the Imperial ambassador's, with most these upon the above important subject; immediately after the perial of these dispatches, that minister gare notice to the president of the states-general, that about the 7th or 3th of this month, a vessel would sail from Antwerp, down the Scheld, into the sea; and that his imperial majesty should look upon any obstacle to the free passage of the said vessel as a declaration of war. A courier also arrived from Paris with dispatches for the French amoassador, in which we hear the French court till recommend moderation to this republic, and advise hem to give way to the circumstances of the times, to avoid a war, and wait for a favourable opportunity to avoid a war, and wait for a favourable opportunity to necessary their rights. Upon this their high mightiness dispatched a courier to Brussels, with their resolution, taken in consequence of the above advice of the French court, and fresh instructions were also fent to viceadmiral Rynst, commander of the Dutch fleet at vic-admiral Rynst, commander of the Dutch seet at the mouth of the Scheld. It is reported that these orders were to let the vessel in question pass under a protest, but this is not credited here.

Corriers have been dispatched to Vienna, Brussels and Paris, and messengers to all the frontier towns.

Od. 13. Our accounts from Brunswick, dated the 37th, mention, that 90 artillery men are set out from antwerp, towards which place two battslions marched on the other. 60 pieces of cannon are expected to arrive on the sti; 60 pieces of cannon are expecte to arrive in that city, and the troops of Bergan and o her places have all received orders to be in readiness to march.

Government have iffued orders for twelve armed brigs and galliots to repair to appointed stations, with all pot-Tole expedition, for the purpose of desending the ports

According to letters from Bergen op-Zoom, the Audrian tr ops are in motion in the neighbourhood of Zindvielt, and in the adjacent villages; quarters are edered to be provided for two thousand men.

Antwerp, fays a correspondent, about which the pub-ic curiosity is at present so powerfully excited, was the the emporium of the European continent, though aw reduced to a mere tapestry, or thread lace shop, with the houses of a few Jews, banners and jewellers adjusting. This ancient store house, or granary of the both has no longer either ships in its harbour, or comnotities in its market. Before the civil wars, under the infatuation of Philip the second, desalcated the ountry, it was faid to do more business in one monty, than even Venice in its most floursshing state in two ears. Its form is orbicular, or rather a bow, of which re river is the string. Its quay is four hundred yards ide, and said to be not less than twenty-two feet deep. No town can be conceived more commodious for trade, on the Scheld, fome of which, in its flourishing consisting the Scheld, fome of which, in its flourishing consisting, are said to have contained a hundred loaded vellels at time. It contains two hundred public buildings, secularly beautiful and magnificent. The threets are at large and regular, the cathedral is a structure of the degance and liberality, the town house has not, when the text are the same and the structure of the same and the sa ethaps for the most exquisite architecture, a superior a the world, and the citadel is essemed one of the trongest fortress; in the Low Countries.

Nothing can be finer than the country adjacent, or ontiguous to Antwerp. Every gentleman's feat in the sighbourhood, is a fort of-calle or chateau. A cirumfance, which powerfully reminds us of those hostile and languinary times, when no man was fase in his own inle, but no proportions to its firength. The defola-on, however, which takes place, in consequence of a bul decay of trade, is firongly marked by the scarceness of decay of trade, is strongly marked by the scarceness money, which prevails among the inhabitants. All tons of provisions are consequently so very cheap, that a stranger may dine in Brusses, on seven or sight dishes of weat, for less than an English shilling. Travelling is try safe, reasonable and charming, where the country, though solitary, continues so pleasing, where the means of luxury almost within every one's reach, and where the roads, which are generally a broad causeway, and such broader than ours, run for several miles in a irright line, and terminate with the view of some noble traight line, and terminate with the view of some noble date or building. So deeply impressed were the rest of turope with the superior excellence of this country in the area of its prolperity, that it was vulgarly faid of it, hat its bread was better than bread, its fire hotter than ire, and its iron harder than iron.

Lord Chefterfield and his fuite still remain at the ince of Wales's hotel in Paris, waiting the arrival of ambifiador from Madrid. It is extraordinary that e nation should be burthened with the expence of this mbaffy to tong before it: can even in appearance be of my fervice. Would it not be time enough to fend an mbaffador, when we learned that the Spanish minister and appointed a subleman to our court; there would hen be lome pretence to lend an ambaffador to Paris; ut as the cale now stands, we are treated with a super-lious contempt.—Query, would the late lord Chatham bimit to this indignity?

The trade to India lays a commercial correspondent, unsidered in a national point of view, is less worthy be attention of Great-Britain than the fisheries upon or own coasts. Our trade to the Indics is carried on man our fhips of war, to refent infults, and protect our commerce from any attempt to circumferibe its limits.

The unexampled cruelties which have been exercifed in India by a certain nameless tyrant, were such, that a dervise had the courage to present a writing to him conceived in these terms: "If thou art a God, act as a God; if thou art a prophet, conduct us in the way of salvation; if thou art a king, render the people happy, and do not destroy them." I o which the honster, with a great readiness and vivacity, replied, "I am no God, to act as a God; nor a prophet to shew the way of salvation; nor a king to render the people happy: ! ut ! and the hourge whom your prophet to mew the way of lat-tam the hourge whom your prophet fands to the nations whom he has in his writh devoted to ruin."

There is an excellent law in the city of Geneva, that marks their wild m and if introduced into our code, marks their wild m and if introduced into our code, might have a very good endency. I his iaw excludes from the magistracy, and even from the great council, or parliament, the children of those who died inforent, except they have discharged their father's debts in a given proportion to their opulence. Few intrances, it is taid, have occurred, where the creditors of the deceased, have not received some compensation, which could not be recovered by any legal process.

Extract of a letter from Natles, September 9.

"As there has been much taik about the 1500 menfent to Malta, to quell the diffurdances there, it may fent to Malta, to quell the diffurtionies toers, it may n t be improper to explain the rile or the diffentions.

" some time ago a priest affailmated his uncre and hisnephew, and took refuge in the notes of the offhop; the judge demanded the affailing to be given up, which the bishop refused; the authority of the then grand master, burt by this resulal, ordered a detachment with all possible circumspection, to take the delinquent from his alylum; the clergy outrageous at this pretended in-fraction of these privileges, bught for nothing but to be revenged of the grand-master; and the dearness of provisions soon summitted an opportunity. The prests railed the people, and a legition was to med, and their plan was to affaffinate the grand-matter, and bring the island under clerical government; but the grand matter fought the rehels in person, imprisoned the eccentait s who somented the discord, behanded some, and exposed their heads on poles. This irritated the ciergy the more, who complained to the peops; but all the representations of the Holy See, could not convince the grand-master that he was wrong, and it is generally believed his inflexibility soft him his sife, as a violent dose of poston ended his days, fince which, there has been no harmony between the order and the ciergy; and the present grand-master, a Frenchman by nation, of the no harmony between the order and the clergy; and the present grand-masse, a Frenchman by nation, of the illustrious samily or R han, is faithfully attached to the principles of his predecessors, and in the present disturbances, has punished several of the insurgent, and narrowly watches the clergy. This is the cause of his requesting our court to send him 1500 men, that he may put an effectual end to the sedition."

OA. 16. The volunteers of Ireland are by no means universally disaffected; many of the more respectable characters among them for property and understanding, are sensible of the value of their present constitution, and of the views of those who wish to destroy it.

There is a little appearance of discontent in some parts of Scotland; but as more than nineteen twentieths of the people are in opposition to this factious spirit, it will insensibly die away, and leave no traces behind it.

Od. 19. A paper of the 9th fays, letters by the French Paris there is a report that the Dutch will agree to the opening of the Scheld, and thus the contention will end between them and the emperor without bloodshed. On the other hand, there are letters from Flushing, which fay they look upon war is ce tain, and accordingly are fitting out four large frigates, to protect the trade on their coaft from imperial privateers, which are expected to be very numerous; and in the pufficipt of a letter from Oftende they fay that news has arrived there by express of an open rupture, the Durch having actually taken possession of Shuys, and a small imperial fort in its neighbourhood. Though we can by no means suppose the latter to be true, a war is probably are no great distance, if we believe the emperor meant any thing in that part of his declaration, where he says, if that he should consider the obstructions of the imperial flag in the Scheld as a declaration of war. Undoubtedly that has taken place; but well informed politicians still think that France will interepose as a mediator, and matters will be accommodated. which fay they look upon war as ce tain, and accor pose as a mediator, and matters will be accommodated, in either case a little time must determine.

"I esh only briefly inform you, that the Scheld will doubtless be opened very thortly. Count Proli, merely by the means of the filver and gold we fend thither; it is nature herfelt that produces this effect; our luxuries cannot be theirs, nor theirs our wants; their climate neither demands, nor indeed permits, hardly any thing that comes from ours. Such cloaths as they have the country furnishes; they want therefore nothing but our bullion to ferve as a medium of value, and for this they give us merchandise in return, with which the frugality of the people; and the nature of the country furnish them in great abundance. This kind of traffic must always leave the balance against us, as we import a great deal; and export but very little; whereas, if we turn our attention to our fisheries we shall not only enrich our country at the expence of our nighbours, but always have at command a body of seamen ready to man our ships of war, to resent infults, and protect our commerce from any attempt to circumseribe its limits. The unexampled cruelties which have been exercised in India by a certain nameless tyrant, were such, that a dervise had the courage to present a writing to him conceived in these terms: "If thou art a God, act as a God; if thou art a prophet, conduct us in the way of salvation; if thou art a king, render the people happy, and do not destroy them." I o which the honster, with a great readiness and vivacity, repited, "I am no God, to act as a God; nor a prophet to she way of salvation is much as a God; nor a prophet to she with way of salvation; the first way for the bring of the line. This morning, however, we find, that the is under way from these roads; in order that the business may be decisively settled one to contain the business may be decisively settled one of the business may be decisively settled one or the court of Brusels as a God; in or a prophet to she will be supplied that will fail through the street on the first am later way for a send a try in the interim, sad ample information, that there you dean to the surface of the surface, which atterwards made a try between their interim, sad the Hague that she is under way from these roads; in order that the business may be decisively settled one way or the other, and that the Dutch may not plead ignorance or her failing, and the orders she has received from court. It is supposed she may lay off Fort St. Philip three or four days longer, but that period will certainly determine whether we are to have peace or war. If the paths uninterrupted, tout en finit; but if not, we go at it ding dong. Entre nous, eighty engineers are arrived here, whole orders are politive, that if this veffel mets with the finallelit affiort, they are to proceed immediately to Fort Lillo and blow it up. "We are fitting here four large trigates, one of 44, two of 36, and one of 30 guns, as guarda coitas, to project our trade, a war with the emperor being expected: and though that power has not much of a naval force, imperial privateers are expected to be very numerous: this prevention therefore, is taken for the purpose of securing our commerce before it is invaded." Letters from Leghorn, dated September 17, mention, that the Algerine corfairs are exceeding y numerous in the Mediterranean, and have lately taken feveral Spanish vessels, the crews of which the Barbarians treat with great inhumanity. The Mogrs had also seized some Dutch and Swedish ships, which they suffered to proceed on their voyage, after committing some petty acts of piracy.

Mr. Gommet has informed the focieties and the public, that on the 18th ult, he saw at Turly, near Bourges, in Berri; a globe of fire, the most brilliant, and about half the size of the moon. It followed the sun and had a luminous tail of about 20 degrees. It constantly shot forth sparks of light as large and brilliant as the planets, and which instantly disappeared. The meteor continued between four and five seconds, and also disappeared. It was about 40 degrees above the horizon, and near the star Arcturus.

KINGSTON, (Jamaica) Odober 9.

As every particular relating to the life of a person rendered to conspicuous as that of the late Dr. Pugh, must be interesting, the following has been suggested to us by a correspondent. Every person who knew Pugh, must have remarked the diffidence and aukwardneft, or rather a feeming bashtuinels in his deport-ment; under that veil, it appears, there hay concealed every symptom of the horrid malady which has since broke forth with such fatal violence. Early in the commencement of our disputes with America, when our adventurers from this island went to New York with the view of fending American regruits hither, Pugh being of the medical tribe, was dispatched for this island with a few persons of that denomination. this island with a few perions of that denomination. At a flort distance from the land, the Yunkees began to repent of their engagements, and when in American privateer, a day or two attenwards, hove in fight, they to a man, refused to fight against their countrymen. In a man with a toul less congenial with the business in which is has lately been engaged, this initance might have called forth some tentaments of generolity and humanity; but Puglis was of a different contruction; if You won't fight," lays he, " well, if we can't make you useful one way, we fiall another;" instantly or-
